1 - LINE CONSECUTIVE LABELERS

These handheld labeling machines are designed to print and dispense labels with sequential numbering, providing an efficient solution for tracking, identification, and traceability. Commonly used in the apparel and textile industry, consecutive labelers help ensure fabric batches of the same color and shade are accurately matched throughout garment production, reducing the risk of color mismatches. They are also ideal for production and logistics environments where unique, sequential identification is needed to support accuracy, organization and process control.

Industries that use consecutive labelers include apparel and textiles, garment manufacturing, warehousing and distribution, inventory control, logistics and fulfillment, food production, manufacturing, quality control, and retail operations.
